Trading Update

- ZOMP is a University of Cambridge spin out that has developed an innovative approach to flow cytometry, a technique used in research and diagnostic applications to detect and measure physical and chemical characteristics of cells.
- ZOMP uses an innovative microlens array system to capture many 2D images from different angles simultaneously then reconstructs a 3D image, which avoids losing critical data that could benefit scientists and ultimately help patients.
- In Q1 2023 FWT invested £265k into ZOMP Group as part of a £2m funding round with FWT VCT, Zeiss Ventures, BGF and Cambridge Enterprise. The funding will enable the company to grow its team and build prototype instruments to engage with early customers.

Recent Events

- The company appointed Kenneth Galbraith as Non-Executive Chair. He has over 35 years' experience in biotechnology and venture capital, having acted as an executive, director, investor and advisor to companies in the biotechnology, medical device, pharmaceutical and healthcare sectors across North America and the UK.
- The company has been working with an intellectual property consultant to develop its intellectual property strategy and has already identified some potential patent filings.

Current Focus and Outlook

- The primary focus remains on building the first lab-based prototype to process samples for early customers.
- The company continues to grow the team and engage with potential investors and partners as it seeks to identify the most valuable applications for its technology.

FWT Value-Add

- Foresight has supported ZOMP with the delivery of its 100-day plan and refining its business strategy.
